

Home Safety for Seniors

Home safety is important for family members of all ages - but for those over the age of 65, falling inside the home can be a serious problem. The National Institutes of Health (NIH) estimates that over 60% of all falls occur inside the home. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), one in three older adults falls each year, resulting in over 2.5 million seniors receiving treatment in emergency departments.

What Causes Falling in Older Adults?

Falls among older adults can be caused by many different things, including:

- Decline in vision
- Medications resulting in equilibrium
- Poor visibility in dimmer lighting
- Muscle weakness or fatigue
- Clutter or hard-to-reach items in the home
- Slick or slippery surfaces, or inadequate shoes

The Dangers of Falling

Falling can cause serious injuries that could result in hospitalization or in severe cases, death. Other effects on seniors could include limited activity, losing fitness abilities, creating fear of falls, or reducing mobility.

Can Falls be Prevented?

Aging itself does not cause falls in older adults. Falls are preventable as long as home safety measures are taken, including:

- Remove clutter, small furniture, cords or wires, or household items from areas where someone might step
- Secure carpets to the floor and install non-slip mats in wet or high-spill areas, such as bathrooms and the kitchen
- Arrange furniture so that there is a clear path for walking through rooms
- Install grab bars in bathrooms and ensure that any stairs have sturdy, accessible hand rails
- Check lighting and add nightlights in hallways, bedrooms, and bathrooms to help increase visibility while walking at night
- Make sure that frequently-used items in the home are easily accessible on lower shelves or drawers
- Wear athletic shoes or flat shoes with non-slip bottoms while walking in the home
- Maintaining an active lifestyle and increasing muscle strength can improve balance and reduce the likelihood of falls
